

TONY HAWK

On coming back from injury at 53

WHEN SKATEBOARDER Tony Hawk snapped his femur while doing a trick in March, word spread that the Birdman was grounded. Not so fast—the next day, after surgery to install a titanium rod, he was up on crutches. Two weeks later he started skating again, and by early summer he was catching air and proving that grit has no age limit. “I guess I flew too close to the sun,” Hawk said of his injury. “But if I can still do this, why would I not do this?”

HOW TO GET RID OF OTHER PEOPLE'S STUFF!

READY TO take back your grown kid's room—or that junk pile your spouse hasn't touched in years? Try these pro tips.

REDEFINE THE ROOM. Repurposing for a reason nudges people into decisions about their stuff, says Amy Tokos, certified professional organizer in Omaha, Nebraska.

SPREAD IT OUT. Short weekly appointments make the job more manageable, suggests Anne Storino, owner of Organize With Anne in Sherrills Ford, North Carolina.

CREATE BOUNDARIES. Don't let kids think you'll store their stuff forever, says Robyn Reynolds, owner of Organize2Harmonize in Southern California. They can't take it all to college, “but they can pare down.”

ASK FOR TIME. Request decluttering as a birthday present, advises Joseph Ferrari of DePaul University in Chicago. “Instead of a gift, I want those boxes gone.” —Joanna Nesbit

Only 16% of Americans ages 50 to 59 know when they'll be eligible for full Social Security benefits. (Spoiler: It's when they turn 67.)
